

HAADTHIP

COMPETENCY GUIDEBOOK

2021

ENGLISH VERSION

Introduction

HaadThip Public Company Limited Competency framework is designed to support the development of an individual ability to be suitable for their job roles. This framework aims to drive employees to have the competencies that align with HaadThip competency model, values, mission, purpose, and strategy of the company, also, the effective teamwork. Additionally, it is a guideline to help the employee grow in their career, enjoy working and apply the competency to other human resources management processes such as recruitment and selection.

This guidebook contains the description, definition, and meaning of each competency and the technique of how to adapt and develop the competency in employee roles. It is a tool that assists the employee to learn and understand the competencies also the guide to designing an individual development plan.

The Talent and Learning team attempts to make the publishing of this guidebook can assist HaadThip employees to learn and develop competency at work in an effective way and use an individual competency to maximize the benefit for self-development, strengthen the organization, and drive the success of both company's goals and financial growth. More importantly, success in building the learning organization in our company sustainably.

Talent & Learning Division, HR

Message from CEO

Dear HaadThip colleagues,

I am very delighted to see the continuous progress of HaadThip's people development program, and the publication of HaadThip Competency Guidebook is ready to be distributed to all employees in all positions as a learning guide to support our work at any time.

Let us recognize that the success of our organization is dependent on its people. People who are passionate about their work and have a strong desire to do what they love, who are curious and never stop learning, who do everything with honesty, fairness, and respect for others regardless of status, gender, age, religion, or education, and who embrace unity, working as a team without being divided into groups.

Everyone in HaadThip has equal importance, yet we all have different roles and responsibilities. We can only be successful if everyone is enthusiastic, dedicated, believe in the same cause, works together as a team and focusing on HaadThip's vision and mission. I wish everyone happiness at work and further success in the future.

With heartfelt greetings and best wishes.

Maj. Gen. Patchara Rattakul
Chief Executive Officer

Message from COO

Dear HaadThip colleagues,

HaadThip has been working hard in developing the capabilities and skills of our people, so that every one of us can continue learning new skills and developing new capabilities, both for our own satisfaction and for the benefit of our organization. It's a journey where the finish line is always moving as the business environment changes and the organizations have to adapt, evolve, and constantly learn in order to remain competitive in the marketplace.

We are very excited to introduce the HaadThip Competency Guidebook, which reinforces a fundamental stone, a very important piece of a comprehensive program to promote people development. It sets the direction, our values and behaviors, hence becoming the reference for other organizational initiatives to map our capabilities, improve opportunities and set the roadmap for our people development programs.

I'm confident that our people development program will continue to improve our people skills and strengthen our organization. The Haadthip Competency Guidebook is a large step forward in this journey. I hope you enjoy the ride!

With best regards.

Jose Henrique Zeitune
Chief Operating Officer

Table of Contents

01

HaadThip
Organization Development

02

Haadthip
Vision – Mission –
10 Values

03

Haadthip
Competency Model

04

What is competency?

05

15 DNA

06

[1] Humor
[2] Interpersonal skill

07

[3] Listening
[4] Peer relationship

08

[5] Understanding diversity
[6] Work/life balance

09

[7] Ethics & values
[8] Integrity & trust

Table of Contents

10

[9] Action Oriented
[10] Critical thinking

11

[11] Customer focus
[12] Growth mindset

12

[13] Priority setting
[14] Result oriented

13

[15] Technical skills

14

30 Leadership Competency

15

[16] Communication
skill
[17] Compassion

16

[18] Flexibility to change
[19] Influencing

17

[20] Inspiring others
[21] Managerial courage

18

[22] Change
management
[23] Creativity & innovation
management

Table of Contents

19

- [24] Social intelligence
- [25] Analytical skill

20

- [26] Negotiating
- [27] Planning

21

- [28] Presentation skills
- [29] Problem solving

22

- [30] Process management
- [31] Business acumen

23

- [32] Managing vision & purpose
- [33] Strategic thinking & agility

24

- [34] Conflict management
- [35] Self-Development

25

- [36] Time management
- [37] Dealing with ambiguity

26

- [38] Decision quality
- [39] Risk management

27

- [40] Building effective teams
- [41] Directing others

Table of Contents

28

[42] Developing direct reports
[43] Emotional Intelligence

29

[44] Hiring & staffing
[45] Motivating others

HaadThip

Organization Development

Haadthip

Vision – Mission – 10 Values

02

MISSION

To be a completely integrated beverage company and to maintain the leading position in the southern market, with revenue, sales and profits soaring on a continuous basis.

To continue to be the manufacturer, distributor and service provider of high quality products to customers and consumers, so that the Company is trusted as part of the South.

To ensure that the Company's personnel have integrity, perform their duties with loyalty and honesty; and have responsibilities to the organization and society as a whole.

To be an organization with good governance, through the creation and development of the type of personnel that the society needs; and taking part in the development and improvement of natural resources and environment in a responsible and sustainable manner.

VALUE

We will create an organizational culture on the foundation of the following 10 values:

1 Integrity	2 Individual Initiative	3 Customer Value	4 Teamwork	5 People Development
6 Mutual Trust & Respect	7 Commitment	8 Always be part of the South	9 Relationship Marketing	10 Fun

Haadthip Competency Model

03

Critical to Success

Consumer & Customer Centric

Teamwork

Digital Transformation

Growth Mindset

Sustainability – Carbon Neutral

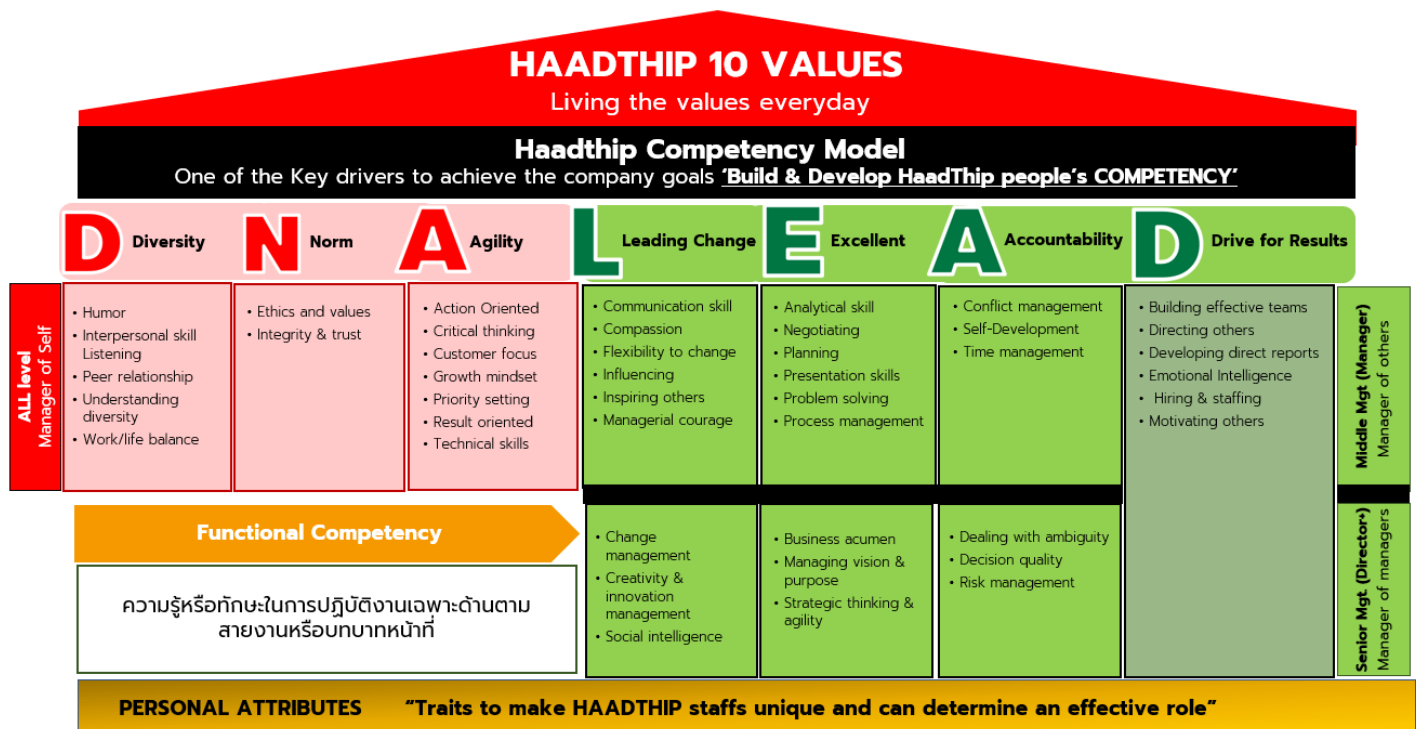

All based on every employee adhering to agreed 10 VALUES on a daily basis ('walk the talk')

Together with the same PURPOSE

Continually increasing profitable, sustainable unit case sales of our products by satisfying new and existing consumers through excellent service to and with our customers at an increasing return

What is Competency?

Competency refers to the knowledge, skills, and attributes that influence behavior that employees must have. In order for the business to succeed in accordance with the organization's objectives and goals, employees must be able to effectively and efficiently apply their skills and knowledge in combination with relevant competencies.

15 DNA

Competencies which required to perform tasks, as DNA that embedded in every Haadthip employees.

	D Diversity	N Norm	A Agility
ALL level Manager of Self	• Humor • Interpersonal skill • Listening • Peer relationship • Understanding diversity • Work/life balance	• Ethics and values • Integrity & trust	• Action Oriented • Critical thinking • Customer focus • Growth mindset • Priority setting • Result oriented • Technical skills

[1] HUMOR

Understanding how to use humor wisely can have a lot of benefits such as generating a healthy team culture, relaxing environment, reducing tension in tight situations, and reducing the bad impact of a conflict. Developing a good attitude toward yourself and your surroundings can lead to new ways of looking at problems and developing a better attitude.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Those who do not have humor or believe that they should not have humor at work, are too serious, wish to avoid being regarded as a clown, and frequently allow others to lose humor, use comedy in a disrespect or offended manner, or use humor at the wrong time.

Development Guidelines

- Greetings with a smile and an open personality and friendly
- Follow other people's humor before you are comfortable to create your own.
- Do not use jokes that make others feel uncomfortable, such as those that focus on person's problem or situations.
- Be humble, loosen up, and enjoy yourself, participating in entertaining activities or volunteering, or doing something enjoyable when there is a party.

[2] INTERPERSONAL SKILL

The key to developing relationships with others is to pay attention to others rather than only your own needs. All employees should develop this competency in order to improve their ability to work and interact with others in a positive and long-term connection.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Those who do not devote time to build relationships, may be too straightforward or too focused on the task, lack confidence or panic when confronted with disagreement, or may take too long to build relationships until it affects the work, and so on.

Development Guidelines

- Listen and be flexible
- Share information and exchange ideas
- Start building relationships with people you dislike by identifying positive aspects of them that others notice.
- Create a shared experience by starting with a shared interest.
- Have self-respect and respect for other, show compassion and give compliments or express gratitude when you are impressed
- Create trust by being punctual and keeping your words.

[3] LISTENING

Listening is different from hearing. Listening in order to understand what others are saying and to communicate. Being a good listener is learning to listen, especially when we don't want to and can bring facts or opinions from others to understanding the meaning and accepting other points of view. Being a good listener will help us in learning new information and receiving feedback in order to better ourselves and build relationships when dealing with others.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Those who like speaking, cutting, interrupting, or ending sentences for others. Not concentrating on listening and frequently doing other things while listening or being unable to understand what the speaker wishes to say.

Development Guidelines

- Concentrate on what you're hearing.
- Try to study and observe the body language and speaking tone.
- Practice asking valid questions that get to the heart of what the speaker wants.
- Before making a comment, listen to the end of the topic and think thoroughly.
- When you are unsure, ask and not intervene.
- Be neutral and no bias.

[4] PEER RELATIONSHIP

In general, we spend at least one-third of our time with coworkers in a given day. Building relationships with coworkers from different backgrounds is indeed important and challenging. Negotiating process will be easier if you have a positive relationship as it will help minimize damage and increase efficiency.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Not good at forming relationships with others, isolated, and unaccepted by teammates. Likes competition and seeks to gain advantages. Making others uncomfortable by putting in too much effort to create relationships. Or reveal confidential or sensitive information in order to create relationships, for example.

Development Guidelines

- Make it a practice to speak positively to others and to coworkers.
- When possible, assist and support the work of others. This includes inviting others to join you in your work or interests.
- If you're not sure how to start a discussion, start by asking questions and being a good listener.

[5] UNDERSTANDING DIVERSITY

Organizations having a diversified workforce are extremely beneficial to success in today's world. Gender, age, race, religion, culture, knowledge, and ability are all values that provide new perspectives to the company. It is crucial for employees to understanding the diversity to be able to work well with a diverse group of people and to drive company growth.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

May feel uncomfortable and showing an inappropriate posture when being with those who are different from yourself. Tend to avoid conflicts and inconsistencies. Or treat everyone the same without regard for distinctions.

Development Guidelines

- Learn about diversity
- With no bias, be open, listen to, and appreciate everyone's opinion.
- Respect the decision of those who disagree with you.
- Talk to exchange ideas other than work
- Do not try to form a group in attempt to gain separation..
- Practice with everyone in a fair and equal manner.

[6] WORK/LIFE BALANCE

Maintaining a balance between work and personal life can help to develop effective work practices. It also improves mental and physical wellbeing which will create more effective and long-term growth potential for the organization.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Too much devotion to one side and result in a conflict with the other. Cannot relax both on the job and off the job. Unable to prioritize and mix professional and personal issues, for example.

Development Guidelines

- Know yourself and find the proper balance. This does not mean a half-half time division, but rather a balance that fits to own characteristics and personality. Find the best time for your daily life.
- Prioritize, set timing for different things and focus on them during the time
- Learn to say no and ask for help
- Spend your free time doing what makes you happy

[7] ETHICS & VALUES

Every organization has ethics and values that are designed for specific requirements. Employees, on the other hand, should adhere to ethics and values in accordance with the general norm and can effectively implement and use ethics and values in the workplace and while solving problems.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Acts irresponsibly or beyond the organization's acceptable limits, dishonest, creates own rules and frequently makes others uncomfortable, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Behave (do things) in conformity with what you say and think.
- Apply the same standard to everyone or every occasion. Maintain balance and constancy.

[8] INTEGRITY & TRUST

Trust and reliability are fundamental requirements of being a part of teamwork. They include the ability to perform duties that inspire people to trust you, compassion, good deeds, and putting the common good first in order for others to trust you, as well as honesty and consistency in action.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Not trustworthy, inconsistent, has difficulty maintaining secrets, blames others for their own mistakes, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Continue to practice to improve your expertise in your own job in order to gain confidence and trust.
- Maintain the confidentiality of information that others desire to keep private.
- Do everything with sincerity, honesty, and no hidden motives.
- Accountable and admitting the fault.
- Be a sharer and a giver.

[9] ACTION ORIENTED

Action is the willingness to act in response to a situation or problem without seeking to avoid or delay. It is one of the most critical operational competencies. The ability to act quickly gives an advantage over waiting for the perfect moment, and there must be a balance in the development of this performance as using this performance in excess or insufficiently can have undesirable consequences.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Slow response to potential opportunity, procrastination, lack of confidence in taking action, or willingness to take risks. Or on the other hand, being too quick to act, results in a lack of planning and analysis of sufficient facts, etc.

Development Guidelines

- To make it easier to get started, divide a difficult task into smaller portions.
- Find balance with perfection that sometimes entails fear of taking risks and avoiding the practice. Don't wait until you lose the opportunity.
- Learn to prioritize
- Develop self-discipline in managing your work and the work of others.

[10] CRITICAL THINKING

Critical and thorough thinking and questioning focusing on reasoning, procedures, arguments, and facts from various views and perspective without emotions, traditional beliefs or prejudices in order to make the most effective conclusions possible and not subscribe to one belief.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Analyze or look at the situation or information from only one angle. Regardless of the facts, forward the information received. Quickly assess opinions and biases without seeking further information or asking questions. Avoid listening to opinions or arguments that differ from your own.

Development Guidelines

- When you acquire information, train yourself to be suspicious and doubtful.
- More than "what," practice asking "why," "how," and "where the information came from".
- Receive information openly and without bias. Do not rely solely on your feelings and thoughts.
- Always looking for new facts and knowledge
- Exchange or receive information from a variety of sources or from people who hold a different viewpoint.
- Practice evaluating the consequences or outcomes of various circumstances through critical thinking.

[11] CUSTOMER FOCUS

Customers include both internal and external customers. Our work focuses on satisfying and meeting the needs of our customers. This includes critical components such as knowing and understanding the customer. Searching for customer needs, managing customer problems, and providing outstanding services, among other things.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Focus on your own business and overlook customers' problems, feel uncomfortable meeting new people or approaching consumers, fail to listen to customers, dislike hearing complaints or requests from customers, or respond to too many customer demands, causing harm to the business.

Development Guidelines

- Build rapport with your consumers and be a good listener..
- Maintain contact with customers in order to be aware of their requirements and concerns in a timely manner
- Practice predicting customers needs and building "knowing customer" relationships.
- Thinking from the customer view and put yourself in their shoes
- Listen to and respond to valid criticism.

[12] GROWTH MINDSET

Believing in potential and ongoing improvement, being adaptable, ready to face challenges, and learning from mistakes are all characteristics of a growth mindset. People with a growth mindset see failure as an opportunity rather than a barrier, and they view difficulties as chances rather than obstacles which make people with growth mindset to be perseverance, never giving up, and a willingness to try new things.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Having a mindset that is locked in the same framework, afraid of making mistakes, believing that you are good enough or that you can't get any better, daring to take risks, afraid to go beyond your own limitations, unwilling to learn new things, do not believe in developing the potential of their own, colleagues, or subordinates, and do not want to grow or be promoted.

Development Guidelines

- Value learning over potential failures.
- Be open to factual feedback that will help you improve.
- Recognize when you unintentionally utilize a fixed mindset in the face of issues or obstacles.
- Plan your work in a sequential manner and reward yourself on a regular basis to boost your self-confidence and realize how far you've come. Eliminate the idea of impossible and the "can't do" mindset.

[13] PRIORITY SETTING

Every day at work, it is critical to prioritize tasks based on their urgency and importance. Prioritizing tasks effectively with goals in mind ensures that the work done provides valuable results. Also, don't waste time on unnecessary activities; instead, make the most of your working hours.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Unable to identify whether activities are important and urgent, or believing that all work is equally important, believing that there are so many tasks that you can't possibly do them all, bad time management, not refusing and wanting to do everything, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Understand the scope of the work and set clear goals and objectives.
- To identify critical tasks, first understand the job's mission and objectives.
- Long-term goals or large activities should be broken down into smaller assignments with specified deadlines.
- Prioritize importance and urgency of the works
- Learn to delegate and to seek support.

[14] RESULT ORIENTED

Performance with a focus on results and goals, identifying the necessary plans, and being able to push or take action by not sticking to the process and being willing to adjust the approach to accomplish the desired results.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Avoidance, too much attention to detail and small actions, focusing on taking the right steps but not reaching the intended results, or the reverse, focusing too much on results resulting to lack of cooperation within the team, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Set specific goals and success criteria for yourself or your team, and monitor the status on a regular basis.
- Plan your work around the most significant factors that influence the end results, such as resources, procedures, etc.
- Be open to new ideas or procedures that will make it easier to achieve the intended outcomes.
- Learn more about developing or creating work that is efficient and effective.

[15] TECHNICAL SKILLS

Technical skills are knowledge and competencies connected to procedures and operational processes that are relevant to the function that every employee should have in order to perform the operation successfully.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Inadequate specialized knowledge leads to poor decision-making, technical errors, clinging to outdated knowledge or technology, being inexperienced or new to what you do, refusing to set aside time to learn, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Learn directly from the experts in the field.
- Study more on related courses
- Learn from your mistakes and past experiences.
- Practice to become a trainer to broaden your expertise

30 LEADERSHIP COMPETENCY

Leadership competency refers to a leader's knowledge, skills, and attributes that are suitable for the organization, business direction, and future business challenges.

L Leading Change	E Excellent	A Accountability	D Drive for Results
• Communication skill • Compassion • Flexibility to change • Influencing • Inspiring others • Managerial courage	• Analytical skill • Negotiating • Planning • Presentation skills • Problem solving • Process management	• Conflict management • Self-Development • Time management	• Building effective teams • Directing others • Developing direct reports • Emotional Intelligence • Hiring & staffing • Motivating others	Middle Mgt. (Manager) Manager of others
• Change management • Creativity & innovation management • Social intelligence	• Business acumen • Managing vision & purpose • Strategic thinking & agility	• Dealing with ambiguity • Decision quality • Risk management		Senior Mgt. (Director+) Manager of managers

[16] COMMUNICATION SKILL

Communication skills are very important for everyone in order for a team to understand their goals and move in the same direction. Effective communication is to focus at the audiences, using speech and body language to express thoughts and feelings appropriately in diverse cultures and situations.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Lack of communication in goals and follow up progress with team, lack of communication to build a good relationship or motivation, communicating in a hurry to cause misunderstandings, communicating by creating fear to the other person to obey or follow, the team fears to share opinions, or the communication is redundant and unstructured, causing the team to be confused, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Practice being a good listener because in order to communicate successfully, you must first listen carefully.
- Exercise motivational speaking, positive communication, and how to motivate listeners to be enthusiastic to listen.
- Reading will help you improve your writing skill.
- Concentrate and pay attention to people who you wish to communicate.
- Learn to capture issues and summarize the meaning.

[17] COMPASSION

For most people, compassion and professionalism at work are frequently incompatible. Everyone requires assistance and support in order to reach their goals, whether professionally or personally. People who do not receive assistance or who feel stressed would have an impact on their work abilities and are unable to assist others, which leads to teamwork problems. Understanding the feelings or perspectives of others without passing judgment on their own feelings or experiences, as well as showing compassion and attention to one another, will help develop a positive work environment and make the job more enjoyable.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Focus only on performance and not people feeling, don't ask or pay attention when people come to discuss personal matters, don't know how to interact with individuals who are having troubles, or may be too compassionate, resulting in the loss of too many benefits, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Start by listening; many times, expressing compassion does not require advice.
- Understand and offer appropriate support
- Avoid stereotypes
- If the problem is significant and requires time to discuss or solve, it is advisable to speak outside of work hours or to recommend a specialist or someone who can help.

[18] FLEXIBILITY TO CHANGE

Flexibility and adaptation are competencies that can help you learn and achieve your goals. Especially in today's world where things change rapidly and unpredictably. Inflexible planning is thus a competitive disadvantage. Employees must consequently be adaptable to the new changing working methods or disruptions.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

When confronted with new issues or crises, refusing to adjust to new ways of thinking or working, distaste of new challenges, sticking to old ways, or being too flexible and adaptable, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Learn new technology to better your work and vision in order to keep up with new changes.
- Always open to learn new things
- Practice using problems as opportunities to learn new things and find creative solutions.
- Allow others or teams to engage in ideas and activities.

[19] INFLUENCING

Persuasion or influencing others is an important competency in creating change since change must begin with changing attitudes, thoughts, and behaviors. Employees use this skill in order to build up ideas, opinions, new perspectives and collaboration with others, and, most importantly, understand how to behave in order for others to trust them.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Unsuccessful in influencing or obtaining cooperation from others, untrustworthy, subordinates refuse to listen or comply, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Set a positive example to develop credibility, regardless of how big or minor the matter is.
- Demonstrate the positive and negative consequences rationally.
- Motivate others without using force, make them want to accomplish it on their own, and offer assistance.
- Set goals to boost energy and motivation.
- Spend time on building relationships
- May provide examples of well-known or successful people

[20] INSPIRING OTHERS

Being an inspiration increases team engagement, builds morale, and becomes a driving force in responsible work toward goals, as well as allowing teams to pass on inspiration and positive atmosphere to other functions.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Not being able to drive the team, resulting in a lack of motivation to reach the goal, not wanting to work or do the job solely on a day-to-day basis, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Create motivation or passion in work
- Take time to listen to others.
- Engage team or others
- Relentlessly focused on the goal and bring on the commitment to the team and others

[21] MANAGERIAL COURAGE

Managerial courage is the courage to express or say what is necessary to the right person and in the right manner, not overlooking the wrongdoing even under pressure in certain situations, as well as being able to provide straightforward and constructive suggestions to subordinates.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Being pressured by subordinates, remaining in the background while others take the lead, avoiding confrontations and not getting involved, refusing to make direct comments, or even being too direct or pointing out the issue in an aggressive manner, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Conduct thorough research and review, before making a decision
- Provide honest, fact-based opinions and not emotional
- Express sincere sympathy to reduce the tense atmosphere
- Communicate objectively in both favorable and negative situations
- Offer solution when possible

[22] CHANGE MANAGEMENT

Change management means planning and taking action to reduce the impact of change, encourage adaptation and acceptance, and creating new potentials to support the changes as targeted.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Unable to plan or use available resources to manage change, focusing on smaller areas regardless of impact or overall change, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Create motivation for changes
- Communicate changes such as reasons, requirements and plans clearly.
- Begin by making small changes to verify, then steadily expanding and improving.
- Integrate changes with work processes and business culture.
- Study the impact and practice proactive work process
- Study project management

[23] CREATIVITY & INNOVATION MANAGEMENT

Creativity and innovation management is the process of nurturing new ideas and adopting creative concepts to apply to new products or services, as well as managing and developing them into market-ready products.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Sticking to or being comfortable with the past, avoiding risks, not understanding how to leverage creativity, using old methods to solve emerging problems, not understanding the market for innovation, not being open to constructive advice from others, or being so committed to doing something new that others can't keep up or become unrealistic, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Try new things, think and do things that are different from what you've been doing before.
- Take the time to thoroughly and extensively study the subject.
- Ask more questions
- Understand the characteristics of creative persons and study how to manage them

[24] SOCIAL INTELLIGENCE

Social intelligence differs from Intelligence Quotient, which is mostly determined by biology. However, social intelligence is developed via experience, observation, and learning from prior successes and failures. People with high social intelligence are able to adapt well to changes in people and their surroundings. People who understand the people around them, understand the reasons of the changes around them, and are able to accept these changes will be able to create a good ambiance or inspire change for the organization.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Often, acting or saying things inappropriately and makes others feel uncomfortable, and refusing to accept differences leads to constant conflict, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Be a good listener and pay attention to people and surroundings.
- Develop communication skills
- Accept differences and show compassion
- Develop emotional intelligence while doing so

[25] ANALYTICAL SKILL

Knowing the analysis of observers, questioning the issues, distinguishing and linking, may analyze situations as well as understand the reasons and decrease errors from receiving information in an era when data is conveyed very quickly without confirmation. Improves in dealing with a variety of situations and making better decisions to inspire creativity and innovative work that is beneficial to the business.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Jump to conclusions based on incorrect or insufficient reasoning or knowledge. Make use of your emotions and your own thoughts to form a habit, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Practice asking questions and being observant.
- When faced with an issue, it is important to not only discover a solution but also to thoroughly analyze the process and the circumstance.
- Do not believe the information unless you have thoroughly analyzed it.
- Play brain teasers such as crossword puzzles, sudoku puzzles, crossword puzzles, chess, etc.

[26] NEGOTIATING

Negotiation is a peaceful approach that involves compromise and trade-offs to achieve the desired result and find mutual agreement for both sides with the least amount of loss and not causing harm to others.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Frequently unable to come to a fair agreement, sometimes wants to win unilaterally or sometimes being too compromise, doesn't know how to compromise, doesn't know how to be diplomacy both direct and polite, doesn't care about others and always want to win, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Develop relationships and study the other side
- Avoid entering the negotiation with a negative attitude.
- Allow yourself to be indulgent in minor details; don't try to win every time.
- Involve third parties or mediators if necessary.

[27] PLANNING

A strong plan will help everyone make better use of resources, predict difficulties in advance, and complete tasks faster and with fewer errors. It is a competency that is important in managing others.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Dislikes planning, waits until the last minute to do work, uncomfortable following work steps, frequently confuses others while working with them, or is overly tied to plans and gets into difficulties with unexpected changes, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Set goal and measurement.
- Plan the framework and assign responsibilities and put the right man in the right jobs.
- Use the program or diagram to help planning.
- Keep track and check the progress.

[28] PRESENTATION SKILLS

Presentation skills are skills that build on communication skills. A successful presenter must be able to communicate clearly to others in order to effectively achieve the presentation's objectives, including the design and planning of the presentation, body language, pace and tone of speech, as well as effective listening and answering questions.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Shy or uninspiring presentation style, ignoring the listener, being unprepared or unable to answer questions, or even trying to entertain listeners too much and overlooking important content, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Prepare information, predict questions, prepare answers, and rehearse.
- Understand audiences and their expectation
- Practice time management in the presentations

[29] PROBLEM SOLVING

Problem solving is a competency that everyone uses on a daily basis. Employees should learn effective problem solving skills in order to avoid recurrence and solve problems at their root cause, because actions taken to solve such problems may have an impact on others or the business's interests.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Not employing principles while solving problems, having a fixed method of addressing problems, constantly needing to solve the same problem again, ignoring the complexity of the problem and focusing on ease of speed, or spending too much time evaluating the problem but not taking action, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Practice root cause analysis
- Collect information, seek opinions, and listen to suggestions in order to understand how to address problems.
- Practice learning from problems in order to foresee similar problems in the future.

[30] PROCESS MANAGEMENT

Process management is the management of resources to ensure that the work process proceeds in the same direction following the process flow, with standardized work and continual process development for optimal efficiency and effectiveness.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Shy or Working unorganized, unable to visualize effective work processes, utilizing more resources than necessary, lacking a systematic thinking, or attempting to push numerous work processes at once and causing confusion, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Plan and outline the process; a chart or diagram may be used to support clear understanding.
- Deeply study and understand the process, forecast problems in the process, and pay attention to the process's flaws.
- Always studying and improving the process

[31] BUSINESS ACUMEN

In addition to technical skills in the field, understanding the business strategy and financial management, are also important in driving the organization forward.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Lack awareness of business principles or information affecting business, lack of market understanding and strategies, unable to relate business goals to own work goals, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Learn about the company's products, services, key sales and marketing processes, R&D, production, and supply chain.
- Study the workflow and connections of different internal functions.
- Join internal and external business meetings
- Talk to the business's customers

[32] MANAGING VISION & PURPOSE

Vision and objectives are what define the organization. It's important to communicate and manage your vision to employees effectively in order to achieve common results.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Unable to simplify complex strategies for communicating to others, failing to demonstrate confidence in the company vision, failing to communicate or inspire others to work with vision and purpose, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Create motivation and inspiration from the company's vision and objectives
- Vision and objective communications should be broad, clear, and simple to understand.
- Communicate by finding a common attitude, demonstrate how employees' efforts influence vision, and focus on the path that leads to success.

[33] STRATEGIC THINKING & AGILITY

A structured creative thinking process and a broad perspective are required for strategic thinking and agility. It is a competency that should be present and used in daily work to assess situations and think critically while making decisions and addressing problems, including developing new strategic plans that increase the organization's competitiveness.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Lack of sophistication, unable to foresee or analyze the future's impact, lack of perspective on how to combine different aspects into a single strategy, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Always learn new information about the business
- Learn and practice systematic thinking
- Be curious and speculate on what might happen in the future.

[34] CONFLICT MANAGEMENT

Conflict is a natural situation that occurs as a result of differences. Conflict management is the process of resolving disagreements in order to maintain balance by attempting to limit potential negative impacts and maximize positive impacts. To manage conflict, the person must be able to motivate others while remaining calm and have the ability making decisions.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Avoid situations or people that may cause conflict, excessive compromise, treating professional disagreements as personal conflicts, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Open mind and understand the issue to find the root cause of the conflict.
- Develop relationships in order to encourage cooperation and show justice in an equitable manner.
- Instead than trying to win every time, learn to compromise and exchange.
- Create a positive atmosphere by using appropriate and correct language.

[35] SELF-DEVELOPMENT

People who constantly learn, grow, practice new capabilities, overcome limitations, and develop themselves in response to changing responsibilities, is always the most successful.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

No attempt to learn, adapt, not accept criticism or advise or accept but not taken into account, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Receive input from others on what has been done well, what needs to be improved, what should be continued, and what should be discontinued, in order to make the necessary improvements.
- Understand your own strengths, limitations, and skill gaps.
- Do not just focus on improving weaknesses while forgetting to retain and grow strengths.
- Study the compensation for weaknesses because certain weaknesses cannot be prevented. They can, however, develop something different or find a means to compensate.
- Don't be afraid to ask for help

[36] TIME MANAGEMENT

Every employee has the challenge of having a lot of work to complete and not having enough time to complete it all. Setting priorities and managing your time effectively are critical for focusing on important tasks and achieving successful results.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Frequently wasting time and resources, easily distracted, disorganized, unable to follow plans, or unable to set a plan for themselves, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Set clear goals for yourself to help you prioritize.
- Make a habit of planning ahead of time and keeping to deadlines.
- Identify your most productive working hours and complete the most difficult tasks within that period.
- Delegate tasks that do not require your presence or attention.
- Understand how to use constructive rejection.

[37] DEALING WITH AMBIGUITY

Dealing with ambiguity at work, where the problem and solution are unclear, is a common challenge. Employees should therefore develop this competency in order to make the right decision rather than the wrong one even if you have limited expertise, time, or experience.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Inability to find solutions or conclusions to ambiguous problems, takes more information than others to make decisions, prefers to do things the same way every time, jumps to conclusions, prefers things that are feasible and certain, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Be patient and ready to accept the pressure and criticism that may come from making decisions.
- Always do research, learn new things, and don't be afraid to be a pioneer.
- Proper prioritization will make dealing with ambiguity easier.
- Get to the bottom of the problem.

[38] DECISION QUALITY

Smart decisions should be based on data collection, analysis, intuition, and appropriate experience, including requesting suggestions from others, in order to select the appropriate approach appropriate to the situation and resources available to implement and achieve the desired goals and objectives. Decision making is one of the primary roles that employees play through their official positions and powers.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Jumping to a conclusion or immediately following a statement or conclusion, make decisions in an unsystematic manner, having difficulty coping with complex issues, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Understand and identify problems clearly, and constantly ask questions.
- Gather as much information as possible before making a choice or taking action.
- Consider a variety of ideas and possibilities. The best decision isn't usually the first one made.
- Study the decision-making system or process of those who make good decisions.

[39] RISK MANAGEMENT

Risk management is the process of controlling and monitoring risk events in a systematic and continuous approach such that the likelihood of a risk event is minimized or the impact of a risk event is reduced to an acceptable, assessable level.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Inability to assess the likelihood or impact of risks, inability to be proactive, often focusing on symptoms rather than root causes, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Forecast and identify trends, vulnerabilities, and shortcomings caused by both internal and external factors on a regular basis.
- Practice critical thinking and systematic thinking to help with risk assessment.
- Practice proactive working to prepare for any potential situation.
- Look for opportunities to use risk as a motivator for change or innovation.

[40] BUILDING EFFECTIVE TEAMS

The key to forming a successful team is to define your team's duties, tasks, missions, rewards, and objectives rather than individuals. Achieving large tasks requires maintaining cooperation and utilizing each team members' individual potential to work together in a balanced and successful manner.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Inability to form or manage teams, failure to develop shared attitudes or challenges in teams, dislikes team meetings, prefers to deal with individuals, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Create a sense of collective motivation among team members by involving them in goal setting and measurement.
- Make effective planning and employ resources in a balanced way.
- Know how to motivate and create a joyful environment for teamwork.
- Create an atmosphere of creativity and experimentation. Learn from mistakes and don't be afraid to fail.
- Open to new ideas, the ideal team is made up of people with a wide range of skills.

[41] DIRECTING OTHERS

Directing others to perform well under command with efficiency and effectiveness requires clear direction, assigning tasks thoroughly and appropriately, planning the work in a systematic and well-planned manner, allowing for two-way communication with subordinates, and bringing out the best abilities of the individual.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Weakly allocated tasks, lack of interest in management and preferring to perform their own work, ambiguous communication, lack of assignment planning, or exercising excessive control over others' creativity, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Learn how to successfully communicate by listening, explaining, answering questions, and providing feedback.
- Assign tasks, delegate authority to employees and open for creativity.
- Be neutral
- Set clear goals and plans, then explain to others to understand.

[42] DEVELOPING DIRECT REPORTS

People's professional advancement is comprised of three components: ambition, a desire to learn and grow, and organizational mechanisms that assist those who want to grow. But most importantly, the eagerness to help to the development of the superior's subordinates, which is commonly challenging.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Not strong at building or developing people, mainly focused on work and overlooking long-term planning for personnel development, does not consider personnel development as their own job, believes that human resource development is just attending training, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Spend time evaluating, discussing, planning development and giving advice to subordinates.
- A fair assessment involves an evaluation of current strengths and limitations, as well as the requirements needed to succeed.
- Assign additional, broader, and more complex assignments.
- Create a culture of constructive feedback
- Create an effective development plan using 70-20-10 model.
- Create opportunities and offer equal support

[43] EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE

Emotional intelligence is the ability to understand emotions and regulate them effectively, resulting in a pleasant and successful cooperation.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Inability to manage emotions, mixing personal emotions with work decisions, placing personal feelings ahead of the company's interests, frequently displaying negative, untrustworthy, or disrespectful behavior, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Learn about and understand yourself, regular mindfulness practice helps you become more aware of your own emotions.
- Take the time to think before you speak and think before you act, reflecting on the positive and negative things that happen each day.
- Never stop learning, always strive to better yourself in order to inspire others.
- Put yourself in other people's shoes, be kind, and practice interpreting other people's feelings.
- Develop a good relationship, listen effectively, don't interrupt, respect others, appreciate, and encourage others.

[44] HIRING & STAFFING

Recruiting and managing talent is challenging. The more diverse talents that can be attracted to join the team, the more capable the team is of accomplishing great things. Working with talented people may be an inspiration and an empowering experience for others.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

May use oneself as the norm or select a specific personality type only, lacks strong employment experience, lacks knowledge of competence or skill criteria, unable to ask questions that allow candidates to express their identity, or may select people from outside personalities only, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Learn the traps and consider factors other than intelligence, such as competence.
- Look for evidence of quick learning and enthusiasm for new experiences.
- Look at all sides, don't just focus on strengths or advantages.
- Study personality and people assessment
- Be open to differences, don't consider yourself to be the norm, and don't only look for people who think like you.

[45] MOTIVATING OTHERS

Capable of motivating others involves believing that it is the manager's responsibility to motivate others, as well as understanding that people differ and so relying on different methods to motivate each individual. You can make your team members more successful if you can find ways to motivate and inspire them.

Characteristics of an unskilled and overutilized skill

Not knowing how to motivate others, causing subordinates to underperform, not delegating authority for others, maybe being unable to read others or being unaware of the needs of others, etc.

Development Guidelines

- Assign important and challenging assignments, and show an interest in other people's work.
- Develop a mindset that allows people to learn from their failures and celebrate their successes.
- Set a reasonable goal
- Study and understand how others work and what they value.